Taxpayer Rights vs. Man's Authority

Preserved Video Transcript, Description, and Public Comments

Original video by Brandi Nicholle Durham

Original source	Facebook Reel
Creator	Brandi Nicholle Durham
Original video	https://www.facebook.com/reel/1399130645340584
Prepared for	FreedomDove.net

Source-video screen capture supplied with the transcript.

Transcript & Publication Note

This document preserves a transcript generated from the publicly shared video and supplied for commentary, research, archival preservation, and critical examination. Paragraph breaks and presentation have been edited for readability. The speaker's wording, including strong language, has otherwise been retained as supplied except for removal of obvious interface debris in the comments section.

Important distinction: Statements in the transcript concerning the meaning of "taxpayer," "legal fiction," "mimic," consent, jurisdiction, contracts, IRS authority, debt, and legal obligations are the speaker's assertions and interpretations. Their inclusion here preserves the source; it does not independently verify them as statements of law or constitute legal or tax advice.

Date note: The supplied file labels the comments "November 11, 2026 @ 11:20," while this preservation copy is being prepared on November 7, 2026. That future-dated label has therefore not been adopted as a verified capture date. The comments are preserved below as supplied; the capture date should be verified against the original source before publication.

Original Video Description

Description: I hope you guys are ready to have spells broken and decode the truth spoken to you in these INVITATIONS from these agencies 😎 I just had a blast recording a video of me reading all three of these and letting you see behind their veils.... I did not need to use ONE SINGLE LEGAL CODE to give you clarity on what this is actually saying without saying and how you make it pertain to YOU when it never did to begin with!

Went ahead and tagged the IRS for good measure because it is time they realize they need to start going back to the generator of the LEGAL FICTION MIMIC to get their fiction debts paid because WE AS A SOCIETY ARE DONE, DONE, and DONE.....

Hey IRS.... we would ALL LOVE and be HIGHLY ENTERTAINED to see you IRREFUTABLY and VERIFIABLY PROVE any of the statements I've made in this video as FICTION.... 🤦

Grab your snacks and get comfy because this is comedy lmao

Preserved Transcript

Transcript begins below. Strong language is preserved because it forms part of the original expression and rhetorical framing.

Taxpayer Rights vs Man's Authority -I hope you guys are ready to have spells broken and decode the truth spoken to you in these INVITATIONS from these agencies 😎

All right, so we're going to talk about something that I find absolutely fucking hilarious. And you can see it on the screen here. And if you see me look to the right, because I'm looking at Ryan.

Anyway, I find this hilarious because of the words, because of the way that we've talked about this in the show. We've talked about this in our private circles. We've talked about this at home.

The programming that goes into the mind to get people to fear. Most people don't know the language that they use. And the little tricky part about the legal systems, legalese, is they like to say things without saying things, without letting you know exactly what they mean.

Because if they were to say exactly what they meant, then you would, by default, go, you would look at it like a fucking marketing flyer that came in the mail. The ones that you always just toss in the trash because you know it's bullshit. That's exactly what you would do when you did, when you read this shit, if you actually saw what they meant.

So this first page, and this is from someone sent me all this. These are real documents. And as I was reading them, I was laughing.

I couldn't resist laughing at all of this. So the first sentence makes me laugh. Your rights as a taxpayer.

The key thing here, one, one is rights. So we don't have rights. If you've watched any of my videos, you know that only the mimic that was made in your or made as you in their image has the rights.

We, as biological, etherical, physical beings with molecular matter, we have authority. We have free will. We do not need rights that give us privileges.

We don't need those things. So that first line there has me like, this is funny. We're already starting with nonsense.

Nonsense. There's no sense made into it. So then the second line, as a taxpayer, as a taxpayer.

So who is the taxpayer? I don't even have to go look at their legalese and their statutes and codes and policies to figure out who the taxpayer is, because I know that I'm biological man made of molecular matter. So therefore I know it's not me. I know that they have a definition in their, in their legal terms that is bringing that back to the mimic that was made of you, the fiction of you, the paper of you, not really you.

So the taxpayer is not you. So your rights as a taxpayer decoded is your mimics, privileges and abilities. That's what they're really saying.

Your mimics, privileges and abilities. So again, has nothing to do with you. And if you looked at it that way, you would go, well, you're not even talking about me.

So why do I even want to read this nonsense? Why do I want to go any further and look at any of this? And that's where it gets funny when they start sending in the form of the, the threats of you owe this and back taxes and all these things. So I haven't read all of this. We're going to read it here together.

This publication explains your rights as a taxpayer. Again, explains your mimics, privileges as, as a, what do I want to call it? What do I want to say? As their property, as their creation and the processes for examination, appeal, collection, and refunds. The taxpayer bill of rights, the right to be informed.

You have the right to be informed guys. You have the right to know what's going on, yet they won't tell you. They'll flat out tell you that you have the right to be informed, but you know why? You know why they won't tell you? Because they're not obligated to tell you the one that has nothing to do with.

They're obligated to tell the fiction and they know that they don't have to tell the fiction because the fiction can't hear. It can't process data, can't process information. They can't speak to it.

So therefore they don't have to tell anybody anything. Every bit of what you're going to see tonight is going to leave the reader in a state of assumption and presumption, just like they operate out of and leave the reader in a state of emotional distress to make the reader go take action against his own wellbeing that has nothing to do with him. And then by default, they're like, well, you consented.

You consented to it because you did. Taxpayers, their mimics have the right. I can't even read this without laughing.

The mimics, fictions on paper have the right. What are they going to do with the rights? What are they going to do with them? They don't, they don't have a body. So what do they need rights and privileges for? How are they going to access it? How are they going to use it? Can't.

All right. So those mimics have the right to know what they need to do to comply with the tax laws. How are they going to fucking comply? I can't get through this.

I thought I would get further. Uh, anyway, how are they going to comply when they can't do anything? They don't have a body to comply with. They don't have a mind to comply with.

They are entitled to clear explanations of the law. How can they process the fucking, how can they process the explanation? If they don't have a mind and a processor, how can they process it? Where are they processing it? They're entitled to clear explanations of the laws and the IRS procedures and all tax forms, instructions, publications, notices, and correspondence. They have the right to be informed.

They're just repeating themselves. I didn't, we already, did you not already state that? Be informed of IRS decisions about their tax accounts. Ah, they have the right to be informed about IRS decisions about their tax accounts.

So the tax is tied to the MIMIC and they have a right to know about the tax that's tied to the MIMIC. So why the fuck are they sending you the letter? All right. The right to quality service.

Taxpayers have the, I can't even read that one without laughing. The fuck? You don't even know what quality service is. What are you talking about? Taxpayers have the right to receive prompt courteous.

How can you be courteous to a MIMIC? I'm sorry, paper. I didn't mean to write on you. Oh my God.

This is great. Somebody send this to the IRS. All right.

Um, and professional assistance in their dealings. How can you assist it? You're only on paragraph two. I'm going to start snorting.

How can you assist it? Again, I'm going to keep reiterating this. It's a fucking piece of paper. It's a fucking piece of paper with your name and all caps wrote on it.

If they want to really assist it, guys, if you really want to assist the fiction that you're dealing with, go assist it to pay you. You know how to do debt discharge. It's your fucking system.

Go assist it to give you the money you're asking for and stop trying to double dip and get everybody else to live in fucking fear. So anyway, assistance in their dealings with the IRS. I can't even get past it again.

Their dealings, their dealings. How, when, and where are they dealing with the IRS? What part of their molecular matter deals with something? It can't do shit without you picking it up. So how is it dealing with it? To be spoken to, oh my God, to be spoken to in any way they can easily, in a way they can easily understand.

Let's break that down. Easily understand, stand under, but again, you can't speak to a mimic. You can, you can talk to paper all day long.

Let me grab a piece of paper and talk to it. Is it going to comprehend me? It'll stand under me, under the comprehension of, because it can't comprehend. So that's what they're accurate and understand to receive clear and easily understandable.

We're repeating ourselves again, communications from the IRS and to speak to a supervisor, motherfucker. How is a mimic fiction paper going to speak to the IRS? How? And I get so fired up about this because I want it to sink so fucking deep inside of you guys that you start laughing at this nonsense instead of fearing it. Because the normal person is going to read this shit and the next paper that I'm going to show you, and they're going to go, all they're going to see is the numbers on it.

All they're going to see is that this agency said, oh my God, I owe something and I got to pay it. They're going to come kick down my door and take me to jail. So I want it to be embedded in your mind that when you leave this video, that you start reading documents from this place, this lens, so that you can laugh at the stupidity and the silliness that is in it because it's not talking to you.

You have to disassociate, disconnect. And what was it that I told you? That they automatically give a disassociative... Oh, it used to be multiple personality. Yeah.

But it's a disassociative identity disorder. Disassociative identity disorder. That's what you get when you are claiming the mimic.

You become two personalities. So this is a non-consensual. So you have to disassociate with all of this nonsense.

Stop thinking that it's you that it's speaking to and realize that it's speaking to something that has nothing to do with you. And the only way that it impacts you is if you think that it's talking to you. You identify with it and then you act in consent of it.

That's it. All right. Here we go.

To speak to a supervisor about inadequate service. All of the services inadequate. The right to pay no more than the correct amount of tax.

So if the registrar at the vital statistics department, when they gathered all the data from your mom and dad to make this mimic of you and all of them that profit off of it, this record, they can discharge debt. They are making money off of this. It's funded.

So therefore, they're telling this mimic that it has the right to pay no more than the correct amount of tax. The mimic, not you. Taxpayers, I'm just going to change taxpayers to mimic.

Mimics have the right to pay only the amount of tax legally due, including interest and penalties and to have the IRS apply all tax payments properly. They're just talking about administrative processes and performance here. That's all they're talking about in that whole thing.

Again, nothing to with you. Something that they can easily go do themselves. The right to challenge the IRS's position and be heard.

How's it going to challenge the IRS? How's it going to speak and be heard? It can't. It can't. So if you put yourself in the position of it and you go challenge the IRS, now you have become it that they are talking about.

But that still doesn't make you it. Just means that you're consenting to be it. You're consenting to identify as it.

And if you go and be heard, you're consenting to be heard and identify as the mimic. Mimics have the right to Oh, my God. Raise objections again.

Can't speak. Can't raise anything. I can't do anything.

And it can't damn sure can't provide anything. So it can't write the documentation, send in documentation and can't do any of that in response to formal IRS actions. Formal IRS actions are just the formalities that they have created and said that and tricked everybody into thinking they have to follow along with.

That's all it is. Or proposed actions. We're proposing an action to expect that the IRS will consider their timely objections and documentation promptly and fairly to consider.

Okay. To expect that the IRS. That's where we're going wrong right there to expect the IRS to do anything timely or promptly or fairly.

They've been lying to you the whole fucking document. So how could they ever accomplish the three of those things? How could they prove that they're timely, promptly and fairly doing anything? And to receive a response if the IRS does not agree with their position. What position are they standing in? They're not standing in a position.

It's a lifeless thing that is just having people just imagine you're that you were a lifeless body and everybody was walking around and making claims on you and just kicking you and doing whatever. You weren't part of it at all. That's what they're doing with this lifeless body mimic.

Lack of body, I should say. The right to appeal. How can it appeal? It's getting very clear where I'm going with this.

As soon as they say these things now, your mind should pick it up. How can it appeal? It's not me. It doesn't have arms.

It doesn't have a mouth. It does have eyes. It doesn't have a nose.

It doesn't have ears. It doesn't have a brain. It doesn't have blood running through it.

It doesn't have a heart. It doesn't have the capacity to do anything at all except exist as it was formed. And it was not formed to do any of those things.

So the right to appeal an IRS decision in an independent forum. Mimics are entitled to a fair and impartial administrative appeal of most IRS decisions, including many penalties, and have the right to receive a written response that the fucker can't read regarding the Office of Appeals Decision. Text mimics generally have the right to take their cases to court.

Generally. Generally ain't the part I'm laughing about. I'm laughing about the image in my brain of this fucking piece of paper grabbing a suitcase with the rest of its pieces of paper and taking itself to fucking court.

The right to finality. Mimics have the right to know the maximum amount of time they have to challenge. It can't process time.

It doesn't operate within time because it can't do anything. So what they're doing is they're trying to this entire time. They're identifying you as the taxpayer because you're identifying you as the taxpayer.

Not because you are, but because you have read this and said, that's me. I'm it. It's like Chris Rock talking about the fucking pharmaceutical commercials.

Now everybody identifies themselves with it. Hey, that's me. I need that.

You're doing the same shit. They're doing the same process that the pharmaceutical companies do on a, on a screen to you through paper. So anyway, let me get back to that.

I got to read that again. Cause I, all right. Mimics have the right to know the maximum amount of time that they have to challenge the IRS's position as well as the maximum amount of time the IRS has to audit a particular tax year or collect a tax debt.

They're stating that the IRS has the, has time to audit a particular tax year or collect a tax debt, but doesn't ever say that it belongs to the biological man made of molecular matter. Not once. Mimics have the right to know when the IRS has finished an audit.

How could it know? Even if you spoke to the paper, how does it know? How does it process that and comprehend that? How does it overstand that? Well, I can demolish all of their fucking arguments. The right to privacy. Mimics have the right to expect that any IRS inquiry examination or enforcement action will comply with the law and be no more intrusive than necessary.

No more intrusive than necessary. I'm only going to look at a piece of you if I have to, or if I feel I need to look at more, you better take that towel off. But they're still not talking about you.

They're still talking about the mimic and will respect all due process. Oh my God, that fucking word. No, I got to go to my post real quick.

Hold on. Cause I said, yeah, thank you. Don't turn that up loud.

Keep it down. Turn it down. Volume down.

No volume down. Okay. I'm going to go to my post real quick because I put this up earlier.

I shared it because these people were talking about, and I say this all the time in sovereign communities. This is the video right here, but it's talking about where we're booked illegally after arrest. And they were talking about the due process.

So I said, the same old parroted nonsense is getting so old to hear. Do you guys hear your logic here? Point one, the system is a fiction and a fraud. That's their first point.

Everybody's screaming. It's a fiction. It's a fraud.

Everybody's corrupt. And then right after saying that point two, so we will validate the system by trying to use its fiction and fraud protocols to challenge its fiction and prod prod fraud. How does that make any sense? Every time you speak these things like, Oh, they didn't do due process while saying it's fraud and fiction.

You're you contradict your own mouth. Broaden fiction means the whole thing. The whole process does not matter and is not relevant at all.

So when you try to defend yourself by saying, but you didn't follow due process, you were giving authority back to the fraud and fiction. We have to think of what comes out of our minds or out of our mouth and into our minds. What we're basically saying in that is the whole process and system isn't illegal.

Just when they up their own fraud and fiction, that's when it becomes illegal. Come on guys, make that make sense. Make that make sense.

I'm glad they said due process. Cause I was on fire with that one earlier today too. So anyway, where was I at? A collection, okay.

Due process rights, including search and seizure protections and will provide where applicable a collection due process hearing search and seizure. You're going to search a piece of paper. You're going to read it real well.

And then you're going to seize the piece of paper and put it in your little evidence files. As long as you identify with that, you give them the presumption and assumption that they need to make sure that they can come and search and seize you the biological man. When you put it on record that there is no you and the mimic being dual personalities here, two things can exist in the same space.

You got to choose which one you're going to be. So you let them know which one you're going to be. And you let them know through your actions, the right to confidentiality.

Mimics have the right to expect that any information they provide to the fucking IRS, it can't provide information unless a man puts it on a piece of paper and delivers it to the IRS. The man is the one providing it, not the mimic. To provide to the IRS will not be disclosed unless authorized by the mimic or by law.

And they throw in the by law so that they can fear you. The law is going to come and get you. But even their law is talking about the mimic.

Uh, uh, mimics have the right to expect appropriate action will be taken against employees, uh, return preparers and others who wrongfully use or disclose taxpayer return information. So they're telling you very clearly right there that if you identify and you play in their sandbox and you fill out their fucking forms and you participate with them, that you are giving consent for them to take action against you right there. The right to retain representation.

Mimics have the right to retain. They can't pay for shit. And they can retain representation.

If you become the representative, that's how they retain it. So to retain an authorized representative, that would be you brother and sister. That would be you through your consent to identify with it of their choice.

See, they're even quoting your authority and your free will to represent them in their dealings with the IRS. So you have by consent decided to represent the mimic in its dealings with the IRS and in doing so giving them the right by how you have administered your representation to take action against you. Mimics have the right to seek assistance from a low income taxpayer clinic if they cannot afford representation.

They're making you think that all of this is about law and lawsuits and all this stuff coming down on you. But what I just said to you is what the truly meaning behind it. The right to fair and just tax system.

That's a funny one right there. The right to a fair and just tax system. You're going to tell me that you're fair and just after you just lied out of your fucking mouth the entire time vomiting on this piece of paper and a nonsense that doesn't fucking matter or have anything to do with me, but you're fair and you're just why you try to trick me into believing that this bullshit has something to do with me.

That's fair and just. Come on now. Mimics have the right to expect the tax system to consider facts.

The tax system consider facts. Where's the fucking facts on the paper? Did they disappear? Poof! They're gone. Where the fuck are they? They don't exist.

So how are they considering facts and circumstances that might affect their underlying liabilities? The mimic is your liability ability to pay the liabilities ability to pay or ability to provide information timely because the liability can't do so. So your representation of it affects its ability to do the administrative process and performance that they want you to do. Mimics have the right to receive assistance from the taxpayer advocate service if they are experiencing financial difficulty.

A mimic doesn't have financial difficulties or if the IRS has not resolved their tax issues properly and timely through its normal channels. I'm sorry IRS, but that means that's on your fucking shoulders. That's not on ours.

The IRS mission, and they're so fucking comical to me guys, provide America's mimics top quality service by helping them stand under and meet their responsibilities and enforce the law with integrity and fairness to all. Oh this is great. This is great comedy for me.

Okay let's go to this one. So if you made the estimate, I haven't read all this one either, if you made estimated tax payments that our records don't show because they don't keep clean proper records and we know that shit, visit the irs.gov, meaning go out of your way and tell them and view what they are saying about your mimic. That has nothing to do with you.

Penalties. More fear porn. Yay.

We're required, this isn't talking about you, it's talking about we are required by law to charge applicable penalties. However, in select situations, we may be able to remove or reduce penalties. In select situations, you're the select situation when you don't consent, when you don't identify, when you don't represent the fiction.

Failure to pay. We assess a penalty for each month or part of a month. You don't pay the tax you owe.

Their language matters. They did not say in one instance, this is a real document that someone sent me that was sent to them. They don't quote that person at all.

They do not at all in this talk directly to that person. They say you because they've already minted in your mind that you are who they're talking about. If your mind's not minted, then you can see right through that and you know that's not you.

Anyway, part of a month that you, the mimic, don't pay the tax the mimic owes by the due date and afterward. Up to 25% of the tax shown on the return. You know what I see in this? Baseless threats with no substance, validity, truth, fact, justice, integrity, nothing.

None of it. So now they put numbers on there because numbers and debts scare people. So this is their fear tactics.

These numbers have to do with their shit. And if you never reported anything to them and never represented that fiction and never went in and stood and identified with it, then they have no fucking numbers. They only have the numbers you volunteer to give them.

That's it. Failure to pay proper estimated tax. Total failure to pay proper estimated tax.

These are all the numbers right there. When you don't pay enough, when the mimic doesn't pay enough taxes due for the year with their quarterly estimated tax payments and the mimic doesn't have enough withholding, we charge a penalty for not properly estimating the mimic's tax. Who the fuck are you charging it to? Nobody.

If nobody is there to be the representative of the mimic. We got an identity problem here. Everybody needs to stop identifying and representing the identity.

For information about estimated tax requirements, download instructions for form 2210 or tax withholding and estimated tax publication 505 from irs.gov or call us for a copy. They want you to call. Especially those of you that live in fear and are easily mongered into the fear state.

They want you to pick up that phone and call. Why? Because the agent on the other side will harass you, will fear you into submission. They're no better than the fucking, uh, all the the fake scammer buildings full of people that are pretending that they're this or they're that and they're getting the old people to give them all their card information.

They're doing the same shit, except they're doing it publicly and calling it bureaucracy, calling it something that you're supposed to pay, calling it government entities so that you bow. So they want you to call so that they can bully you into submission. So you bow, you kneel, and you kiss Caesar.

So anyway, note the penalty amount shown here may differ from the amount shown on this notice. The computation shown here, so they're already telling you, we're kind of telling you the truth, we might be lying, we can make it up, you won't ever know. The computation shown here may include late payment penalty on amounts due before the adjustment.

We are required by law, again bringing up that word law because everybody fucking shrinks and shrivels when they hear the law because they don't know that the law is a legality that doesn't fucking matter either. So anyway, we are required by law to charge interest when the mimic doesn't pay its liability on time. Woo! Okay, good for you.

You're required by law to charge a mimic for something that still has nothing to fucking do with me. Under penalties, we cannot reduce or remove interest due to reasonable cause. I don't give a fuck what you can reduce or remove from the mimic that doesn't belong to me that you guys created and play with in your sandbox.

It's got not shit to do with me. So why do I give a fuck? Interest accumulates daily, so the longer the mimic waits to pay, the more interest we add to the mimic's account. Again, congratulations.

Go do it. That's fucking fun wasting your time. Go do it.

All right, then more more money. All right, where to find more information? Visit irs.gov for more information related to this notice. If the mimic is still unsure about why we made these changes, he can call us with his lack of fucking mouth, voice, and vocal cords.

And an IRS representative can provide more information about the errors that we identified on the mimic's return. The mimic's return that you represented with your consent and authority. See, this is what I say.

You always had authority. You always have authority. It never left you.

It's always there. You're just using it against yourself, and that comes from ignorance, not knowing any better. And that's okay, because ignorance is leaving the fucking building tonight.

Taxpayer rights and sources for, uh, mimic's rights and sources for assistance. The Internal Revenue Code, IRC, gives taxpayers specific rights, gives mimic's specific rights. The mimic Bill of Rights groups these into 10 fundamental rights.

See, IRC section 7803A3. IRS employees are responsible for being familiar with and following these rights. For additional information about the mimic's rights, please see the enclosed publication 1, Mimic's Rights as a taxpayer.

Mimic's Rights as a Mimic. That's what that really reads as. All right, next page of nonsense.

Important. Your 2024 return has been changed. Important.

The mimic's 2024 return has been changed, and we're just wasting our energy, our resources, our paper to tell you, because we know that there is a percentage of you that are going to identify and represent yourself or represent the mimic and run to give us your money. So it's worth us spending. This is our investment.

This is our promotional marketing investment. This is our flyers in your mailbox to get you to run and give us your money. The mimic's 2024 form 1040 tax return was changed to match our record of payments the mimic made.

If you represented the mimic, then you made those payments, but they're still talking about the mimic. They still only have contractual abilities and with the mimic, that's their boundary. They have no contractual anything with you.

You now owe, the mimic now owes $6,896.20. Why? Because it was represented out of ignorance. The notice explains what was changed and how the mimic can dispute the changes. So do you want to carry on representing the mimic and identifying as it to go dispute this? Because the moment that you do, instead of flat out telling them, you're not even talking to me, even if you ignore them and the things that they do that we have other people that they have flat out robbed, not even told them that they owed anything, took all of their money out of their bank account and still didn't even tell them, here's the amount that we took and here's the total that was owed, nothing, no communication whatsoever.

If you agree, if the mimic agrees with our changes, it can pay its balance online by December 8th, 2025. If the mimic agrees, how could the mimic agree? It would need you to agree to identify and represent it for you to stand up and agree and pay it. Payments the mimic made, $0.

Payments that the mimic owes, $6,115. I don't see what that says. Penalties, $522.

Interest, $258. It'll just come up with all kind of shit. It's due by December 8th, 2025.

Oh, it's due by, it's gonna be late. The above summary may not reflect transactions within the last 20 to 21 days, like it fucking matters. What to do if the mimic disagrees with our changes? Oh, how can it disagree or agree? If the mimic disagrees with the changes we made to its return, contact us again, call us to review its account with a representative.

Alternative, alternatively, the mimic can send a letter to address shown below indicating the mimic's disagreement. So if you send in a letter, you're not sending in a letter to represent it in agreeance or disagreeance. You're sending in a letter to say, I'm not who you're fucking talking to and stop sending me shit.

If you choose to respond in writing, if the mimic chooses to respond in writing, you know, cause it has hands and it can write. It needs to be sure to include its taxpayer identification number as well as the tax year and tax form number and allow for additional processing time. The rights to request a reversal if the mimic disagrees with our changes and to appeal to the US tax court.

They have to bring in the law, fear monger, fear porn, and now they're going to bring in US tax court and everybody that doesn't know any better is going to go, Oh my God, the tax court, uh, I owe all of this. And then they're going to start throwing themselves into a very dark space, fight or flight, trying to overwork themselves, draining their life force to pay some shit that has nothing to do with them. Described above, do not apply to changes we made to the mimics return to match our record of payments made on the mimics account.

However, the mimic may still contact us by phone or in writing to dispute changes that we made to the estimated tax payments credits from another tax year and our payments made with an extension of time to file that, to file that mimic reported on the mimics return. Again, this is an invitation. It's not mandatory.

It's inviting you into play. It's inviting you into its sandbox. It's inviting you into its forms and functions and processes and performances.

It's an invitation only. You do not have to represent it. You do not have to do anything.

You don't have to accept an invite. If someone, any other person invited you to something that you didn't want to go to, you would flat out say no. The problem is you don't know it's an invitation.

And then the other side, other half of, you know, it's an invitation, but you think that you still need to argue your point that, um, or use their fraud and fiction to try and prove your points about their fraud and fiction, instead of just disassociating with it entirely, not acknowledging, not giving it energy. I am doing an IRS document right now because I've already served the IRS since 2022 is when I started giving them, um, letters and firing them a fiduciary duty in our lives and all of that stuff. But I'm doing one right now.

And it's not to debate whether or not the things that they're saying are valid or true. It's saying all of these people, they're not in your jurisdiction anymore. They never were to begin with.

And anything that you do from this point forward is absolute harassment will not be tolerated. Uh, more information about our changes, the mimics tax calculations, calculating all this shit. Again, more numbers that enact emotions and fears inside of somebody that makes them want to take action against their own selves, against their own wellbeing.

So anyway, that is all of the documents. But when I was reading it, I was like, and I was talking to who whose documents these were, and I'm laughing the entire time I'm reading the few parts that I did. And I was like, can I please use this so we can break some spells that are on people so that they will stop identifying as this mimic and stop fucking themselves in their own ass representing it.

Stop playing in the sandbox, stop going in circles that will never end as long as you keep playing. So anyway, that is my two cents for the night. I hope you have a beautiful night and I hope that you have a wonderful time reading documents now.

And anytime you say you see taxpayer or any other definition that they have given and defined in their legal system, not talking to you, start replacing it with the word mimic. Every time you see you, your, or that definition, and then watch what happens inside of you from doing so. All right.

Good night, guys.

Public Comments Preserved with the Source

The supplied source document also contained public comments. Empty reactions, interface controls, and "Reply" labels have been omitted; substantive comment text is preserved below.

Smart Arjuman

> Strong reactions often come from people questioning authority and language at the same time. Stepping back to examine how messages are framed can bring clarity without escalating emotion. Discernment tends to be most useful when it invites understanding rather than amplifying conflict.

Desiree Jacobs

> In South Africa the receiver of revenue is now envisaging a single ID number which is the IRS reference number, but it becomes your ID number that gets used across the board for everything . I just scanned the article quickly, wondering how to navigate this latest attempt to get everyone on their system. So now they're making the mimic go digital lol. The paper kingdom is transforming into the digital kingdom .

Desiree Jacobs

> Listening for the second time. Hilarious. I'm going to listen again lol it's too funny .

Source and Republication Record

Original video: https://www.facebook.com/reel/1399130645340584

Creator: Brandi Nicholle Durham

Preservation purpose: To retain the original video commentary, accompanying description, and selected substantive public comments in a readable source document that may be linked from FreedomDove.net.